Molyneux's Question and the History of Philosophy

Edited by Gabriele Ferretti and Brian Glenney

Series: Rewriting the History of Philosophy

In 1688 William Molyneux sent a letter to John Locke. He asked: could a man who was born blind and has learned to distinguish a globe and a cube by touch, be able to distinguish and name these objects by sight, once he had been given the ability to see? Molyneux's letter fascinated Locke, and psychologists and cognitive scientists wrestle with it today. Is it a thought experiment that can never be answered? Is one sense more fundamental than others? Are the senses individuated or linked? This collection that explores these questions and more. Essential reading for students and researchers in philosophy and the history of psychology and cognitive science.
